

Abstract

Career Opportunities for School Business Officials

Paper for Presentation at AABRI Conference, October 2018 Orlando

By

Brian Monahan, Ph.D.
Clinical Associate Professor and Acting Chair
School of Education
Pace University

Salaries in public education were once viewed as a deterrent when it came to recruiting candidates. That is no longer the case in many places. At selective school districts in many parts of the country, there is keen competition for teaching and administrative positions. As a result, the financing of public education has become even more challenging in recent years. The position of School Business Official has become a key leadership position. Individuals that are qualified for such a position are usually actively recruited. The presentation will describe how one university is working to meet that demand through the implementation of an online model of preparation. The presentation will cover issues that school districts face in recruiting candidates. It will also cover the preparation that those seeking these positions need to be successful.