Abstract

The goal of the extreme left in America is to destroy capitalism and in the process to destroy democracy. This has become very evident in the past 14 years, starting with the election of President Obama in November 2008. Prior to the Obama administration, the Democratic party was very centrist and both the Republicans and Democrats frequently worked together. Under President Bill Clinton, the last Democratic president prior to President Obama, the federal budget was balanced, the 1994 crime bill was passed, and a Welfare to Work bill was passed. Today Bill Clinton would be considered a middle of the road Republican. President Obama's only legacy, Obamacare, or "socialized medicine" is a major step in the socialization of America. President Biden, the next Democratic president since Obama, has a much greater record in helping to socialize America. Under his administration "Bidenomics" has been a disaster for America. Inflation, spending, and cost of living are out of control.

Why are these facts important when it comes to the destruction of democracy? The more the chaos, the greater the need for government control. Without the threat of chaos, democracy thrives and the need for "big government" is non-existent. With chaos comes the "need" for the government to step in and "save" the people from the harms that beset them, which were caused by the government in the first place. The bigger the government, the greater the loss of individual freedoms.
